I am very upset at the limp slap that the US government is giving Microsoft. I have worked in the tech sector for 10 years and have watched microsoft steamroll innovation at every turn.

Try to find an email client for windows that is not made by microsoft. How about a word processor? They don't exist. Microsoft has so devastated the competition by giving away such services or buying out competitors that it holds all the cards.

I can understand why the federal government is afraid of microsoft. The government runs windows on their computers, too.

Please look into more punitive action against this corporate bully.
